

José Guerra

It is not how good you are, it is how good you want to become.

José started his career as a Community Pharmacist and earlier assumed a leading position thanks to his sense of responsibility. He took most advantages of working in a senior environment, developing skills in procurement and stock management, team management, front office and back office, to name a few. After an Executive Master in Management and Marketing for Pharmaceuticals, José started a new path, embracing a new professional challenge. He switched to business to business, on a more technological area and became a consultant for the hospital industry –implementing healthcare projects and solutions. His team manages logistics and medicine inventory for clients such as public hospitals and private healthcare corporations.

Honesty, sincerity, and focus are the skills he most values in his co-workers. José believes that open communication and sharing all information is a plus for better teamwork. In his free times, José enjoys reading books about management and productivity and watching Formula 1 races. “If you want to cross the finish line, you must look at the horizon” is his motto.
